Foreword

When the evening grows quiet and the night wraps around the house like a soft blanket, the piano becomes the gentlest companion. These five little pieces are like a warm cup of tea in your favorite mug on a cool autumn evening: they warm you from within, soothe you, and let your soul drift away ever so gently. Five familiar melodies, lovingly reduced to their very essence – so they flow effortlessly from your fingers even in quiet moments.

Beethoven's Moonlight Sonata glides like silver moonlight through the darkness. The gentle triplets rock you back and forth until you almost feel the cool night air on your skin.

Chopin's Nocturne op. 9 No. 2 whispers of longing and tenderness. The melody floats like a distant dream that envelops you softly and never quite lets go.

Debussy's Clair de lune shimmers like moonlight on still water. Each note a drop of silver, bathing the night in a quiet, magical glow.

Brahms' Lullaby cradles the heart to sleep, as if you were a child again. The simple melody wraps around you like a familiar blanket, warm and safe.

And finally Schumann's Dreaming (Träumerei) – a tender glimpse into long-ago childhood days. Here a bright space opens full of innocence, even when the night outside is deep and dark.

Each piece is distilled to its pure essence on just one or two pages – only the heart of the music, no excess weight. You don't need to practice, only to feel. Play them slowly, play them softly, just as the moon wanders through the clouds: sometimes brighter, sometimes more subdued, always true. Sit at the piano, close your eyes, let the night in and the notes out. On quiet nights, this is perhaps the most beautiful thing one can do.
